

LENAHAN & DEMPSEY LAWYERS EARN NATIONAL CERTIFICATION

Attorney Timothy Lenahan

Attorney Matthew Dempsey

Attorney Alan Schoen

Attorney John M. Mulcahey

Lenahan & Dempsey has been notified that four of their lawyers have earned a prestigious, nationally recognized certification. According to the National Board of Civil Pretrial Advocacy, Attorneys Timothy Lenahan, Matthew Dempsey, Alan Schoen and John Mulcahey have all earned the designation of Certified Civil Pretrial Advocate.

The National Board of Civil Pretrial Practice Advocacy is a division of the National Board of Legal Specialty Certification (NBLSC), a nonprofit organization accredited by the American Bar Association. The Association says its mission is to provide board certification for attorneys in specialty practice areas, including civil trial law.

Timothy Lenahan, Matthew Dempsey, Alan Schoen and John Mulcahey also hold the distinction of previously being named Certified Civil Trial Specialists by The National Board of Trial Advocacy. According to the NBLSC, fewer than 4% of all practicing lawyers are certified by an American Bar Association accredited or state sponsored certification board.

Lenahan & Dempsey is one of the largest firms in Northeastern and Central Pennsylvania which protects the rights of the seriously injured and their families. The Firm has offices in Scranton (main office), Wilkes-Barre, Tunkhannock, Montrose, Berwick and Stroudsburg. The Firm does not charge fees unless they recover damages for their clients.
